Moody's Analytics and the Zhejiang Qiantangjiang Institute of Financial Research (QIFR) to provide credit certification in China

NEW YORK, September 10, 2018 – Moody's Analytics and the Zhejiang Qiantangjiang Institute of Financial Research (QIFR), based in Hangzhou China, announced their collaboration to provide credit certification to financial professionals in China. The initiative aims to bring a globally recognized credit certification to China's financial industry, developed with the expertise in credit assessment and risk management of Moody's Analytics, a leading financial intelligence and learning solutions provider.

Moody's Analytics will work with QIFR officials and leading industry experts to adapt the Moody's Analytics Certificate in Commercial Credit (CICC) to China's credit sector. The CICC certifies that professionals have achieved the highest standard of proficiency in credit assessment.

On the announcement, Chairman Shen Rongqin of QIFR said, "Our collaboration with Moody's Analytics will provide China's banks and financial institutions with a robust understanding of both international and domestic best practices in credit. We are confident Moody's Analytics and QIFR will equip China's bankers with expertise to operate effectively within the context of China's financial industry."

Ari Lehavi, Executive Director of Learning Solutions at Moody's Analytics, said "Moody's Analytics has extensive experience providing financial education to banking, insurance, and capital markets professionals in China. We are honored to collaborate with QIFR and look forward to a long-lasting relationship with an institute that shares our commitment to excellence in financial services education."
